Neil Brein - is a self-taught filmmaker and also a man that doesn't know anything about what he's doing.

His films is something that he did himself, about himself and that is sponsored by himself. So far, he made five film about different stories. My favorite is the first one. It's about a programmer that lives in his car, somewhere near the sea, works for the government and does the most random things through the film. The problem is that the main actor is Neil Brein himself. Not only that, but the movie is also called "Neil Brein" and has Neil Brein on its cover. This facts could make you think that it's an autobiographic movie, but no it has nothing to do with his man's life at all.

I don't want to give any spoilers about it, but I highly don't recommend for anyone to not watch it. Despite the movie being absolutely horrible it's a great example how to not make films. Also it's so bad it becomes funny to watch.

In the end I want to say if that I consider Neil Brein's film the worst in the history of lifetime, but I want for people to acknowledge them more, because for all the effort Neil Brein made to film his movies.
